Houston-based energy giant Dynegy has proposed a risky plan to purchase five dirty coal plants in Illinois. The company’s dirty secret is that the plan only works if it is allowed to violate Illinois’ landmark pollution reduction law through 2020, and possibly beyond.

Dynegy is asking Governor Quinn’s Illinois Pollution Control Board to green light its risky business deal before the deal is even complete. The Illinois Pollution Control Board is responsible for protecting our air, not Dynegy’s dirty profits. Dynegy’s plan to pollute will mean a whole new generation of Illinois children will grow up with asthma and respiratory distress. Illinois families can’t wait for clean air. Dynegy must play by the rules and follow Illinois’ common-sense clean air standards.
