Last month, Senator Harry Reid led the way in the fight to end Washington obstruction, taking action to end the abuse of the rules in the Senate and ensure critical nominees who had been blocked from doing their jobs could get to work for the American people.

It’s a victory for everyone who understands that we need Congress to actually work to protect our air, our water, and the health of our families — and for everyone who believes that a fully-functional government should be the standard, not the exception.
