FROM ONE NEIGHBOR TO ANOTHER, THANKS MONTANA DAKOTA-UTILITIES FOR PROTECTING OUR COMMUNITIES AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

The Montana Dakota-Utilities company is “in the community to serve,” and the company just lived up to that reputation by committing to retire the Heskett coal plant within the year. This will mean cleaner air and water for North Dakotan families.
Toxic mercury pollution emitted by the Heskett coal plant makes its way into the Missouri River where it may put nearby families at risk. Yet Heskett’s owner, the Montana-Dakota utilities (MDU), is taking steps to reduce mercury emissions at all of the other coal plants it owns.

Why is MDU putting the Bismarck-Mandan community at risk?

Tell MDU to stop mercury pollution from Heskett coal plant and transition to clean, abundant wind energy.
