Illegal logging sets off a domino effect of harm to communities, wildlife, workers, our climate, and our economy. Not only does illegal logging destroy valuable forests and fuel organized crime, it undercuts American businesses by an estimated $1 billion each year. The Lacey Act, a historic piece of conservation legislation, is the most effective tool we have to stop illegal logging by ensuring there are consequences for companies that source and trade cheap, illegal timber. We call on the U.S. government to fully enforce the Lacey Act.
