If the Oklahoma Corporation Commission approves OG&E’s rate increase, the average Oklahoma business will see a 15 to 17 percent hike on its electricity bill. But we have the opportunity to invest in homegrown energy that creates jobs and industries right here in the Sooner State. Oklahoma’s local wind energy provides a more affordable option than OG&E’s proposal — saving ratepayers money and undercutting the need for expensive upgrades at old, dirty power plants.

OG&E needs to take its short-sighted, costly plan back to the drawing board.
